London, January 2 A letter from Mr. Leslie Stephen on Carlyle's house and the proposed purchase of it appears in "The Times" of Monday. Mr. Stephen's name is of such weight in the world of letters that his appeal will perhaps, stir that world, hitherto somewhat apathetic on this subject. One passage

-AN ANECDOTE.

may quote: I may quote:

I need not speak of the constant references to the house in the voluminous Cariyle literature, which, whatever else may be said of it, contains the most graphic portraiture of a man of genius that has ever appeared in our language. There is, I thirk, no house in London possessing such unique interest to all who care for literary as-

"It is frequently visited by our American cousins," adds Mr. Stephen. It is, and the visits will surely become more frequent when once the hor shall have been bought and its preservation assured. It is not only against what Bacon calls the waves and weathers of time that it has to be made safe. Mr. Stephen reminds us all that Chelsea, though fall of associations from the time of Sir Thomas More, whose house was close to Carlyle's, "Is a region in which modern changes have remorselessly swept away a very large part of the relics of the past. We hope to rescue Carlyle's house from this fate." He reminds us also, very aptly, that to Carlyle himself such associations were dear. "In this mad, whirling, all-forgetting London," says the Chelsea sage, "the haunts of the mighty are hard to discover. With Samuel Johnson may it prove otherwise." Mr. Stephen and all of us desire that it may prove otherwise with Thomas Carlyle.

Since then, a first list of subscriptions has been published. It includes, beside the $500 from the German Emperor, $250 from Lord Rosebery, the same amount from Lord Ripon, together with $100 from Lady Ripon; Mrs. Tyndall, widow of the lamented Professor, contributing an equal sum. Lord Rothschild gives $125, perhaps partly in memory of his friend and Carlyle's friend, Froude, American donors include Mr. Pierpont Morgan and Mr. William Waldorf Astor, each for $125; the American Ambassador, the late Secretary of Legation, Mr. Henry White, Mr. E. R. Kennedy, of Brooklyn; Professor Charles Ellot Norton, Mr. Andrew Carnegie and some othersall in advance of the organization of an American Committee. Other English subscribers are Mr. Huxley, Mr. Frederic Harrison, Dr. Garnett, of the British Museum; Lord Houghton, Mr. George Murray Smith, the eminent publisher; Mr. Leonard Courtney, several members of the Carlyle family, Mr. Miller and Mr. Lumsden, the authors of this movement, and Archdeacon Farrar. This first list foots up about $4,000.

The Committee has held two meetings, an Executive Committee of ten has been appointed, with Mr. Leslie Stephen as Chairman, and a systematic effort will now be made to raise the whole sum needed. American contributions may be sent without waiting for the organization of the American Committee, to Mr. Pierpont Morgan, Wall Street, New-York, who has been so good as to say he will take charge of them and act as banker to the fund. The matter has now advanced so far that there can be little doubt that the house will be bought, and the home of Thomas Carlyle saved from the fate which has threatened it. The Committee intend also to issue, to subscribers only, a memorial volume of the proceedings incident to the purchase, with a complete list of contributors. The two names most recently added to the English Committee are Mr. Henry Irving and Lord Rothschild. With those already mentioned, they show how wide is the interest in the Memorial, and how farreaching was, and is, Carlyle's influence.

Mr. Skelton continues in the January Blackwood his Reminiscences of James Anthony Froude, of which the most interesting passage is perhaps that relating to Carlyle and Froude's Biography of him. Froude writes:

I am more surprised than I should have been at the reception of the Reminiscences. Carlyle himself—the same Carlyle precisely have known for thirty years; and I have known for thirty years; and it seemed to me that my duty was to represent him for let him represent himself) as near the truth as pos-sible. To me in no one of his writings does he appear in a more beautiful aspect, and so, I am still convinced, will all mankind eventually think. I cut out everything which could injure anybody. To have cut out his general estimates of men and things would have turned the book into a caput mortuum. . . . In a year or two every one whose opinion is worth having will be every one whose opinion is worth having will be grateful for having a true Carlyle before them, and not a mutilated and incredible one. . The end will be that C. will stand higher than ever, and will be loved more than ever. When a man's faults are not such as dishonor him, we are all the nearer to him because of them, and because we feel the common pulse of humanity in him (1881).

What motive could I have in writing as I have done except to do what I believe Carlyle to have wished? (1882).

The "year or two" have long since passed and still some of those whose opinion is worth having are not yet grateful for the true Carlyle which Froude gave them. The wrangle over the book goes on, intermittently. Froude is still attacked. Perhaps the majority are against him. Carlyle's fame is still a little obscured. The truth is that the Carlyle worshippers who knew him only from his books worshipped a more or less imaginary Carlyle. They had idealized their hero. We may be quite sure that he would not have thanked them for that. He had in him the passion of veracity. Sooner than swerve from his loyalty to truthfulness, he would have suffered in fame and in other things. Froude understood him Carlyle left contradictory messages and instructions about his papers. Froude had to determine which of them to follow-which most nearly expressed the true mind and the final purpose of the great writer who was tormented before his time by remorse and a kind of tragic despair It was no easy task. But Froude had something besides the written letter to guide him. He had his thirty years' intimacy with Carlyle. To no man had the grim giant ever poured out his soul as to Froude. None other was in so full a sense his spiritual disciple. The disciple interpreted jarring written messages of the master in the light of the past which spread itself out before him. That is what Froude's critics seem never to have understood, or never to have admitted, Who was most likely to judge truly, the near friend and trusted friend, or the stranger-critics? And, whatever Carlyle may have wished, there remains the final verdict of mankind, to which he and his biographer alike looked forward. A year or two is a short time. A generation soon passes. We are still living in the lifetime of those who knew Carlyle. Froude has but just gone from us. The voice of posterity has not yet begun to make itself heard. When ours are silent, that will resound through the ages. There is not much use in trying to anticipate it, yet how is one to doubt that on this question between a true and a false portrait, between a perfect and an imperfect likeness, between the real and the im aginary Carlyle posterity will decide for what is true and perfect and real? There are some things which are not temporary but eternal; not of to-day or yesterday, but for all time; not accidental, but vital; and among them is that lofty ideal of fidelity to what is genuine and accurate which Fronde set before him when he resolved to give Carlyle to the world as he was. I know that he at least, though his anticipation did not come true so soon as he expected, lived and die i convinced that he had done right, and that ultitribunal to which he made his final appeal was his own conscience. He was not indifferent to the opinion of others, but he never put it first, and, though the reaction came more slowly than he hoped, he was content to wait. He died be fore it had become complete, or perhaps even general. But neither he nor we have had before us the most authentic testimony on this point. The elder generation had delivered its verdict and, as the way of elders in, was disposed to abide by it. But what of the younger? What of those fresh minds which apply themselves to this problem? They escape the prejudices which beset the contemporaries of Carlyle. They will judge for themselves and not according to our lights. They are only beginning to be heard, or heard of, in the world of letters. We hardly know who they are. But no generation has a monopoly of wisdom, nor is there any reason to doubt that the next, though it may not bring forth glants, will have its full share of critical intelligence, and will presently express itself on

Mr. Froude's own comments on the care and accuracy with which he wrote history have been reproduced in "London Society" from a lecturdelivered in America so long ago as 1872. They are at least as interesting and timely now as then. He said: My History of England has been composed from perhaps 700,000 documents, nine-tenths of them in different MSS, and in half a dozen different languages. I have been unable to trust printed copies, for the MSS, often tell stories which the printed versions have concealed. I have been unable to trust copyists. I have read everything myself. I have made my own extracts from papers which I might never see a second time. I have had to condense pages into single sentences, to translate, to analyze, and have had afterwards to depend entirely on my own transcripts. Under such conditions, it is impossible for me to answer that no reference has been misplaced, and no inverted comma fallen to the wrong words. I have done my best to be exact and no writer can undertake

There is in that passage something equally pathetic and manly. Whoever knew Froude knew that it was never in his nature to shirk trouble, and that for truth he, like Carlyle, had a passion. Those are the two conditions essential to accurate historical writing. His immense labor was not without cost to himself, and especially to his eyes. They served him well to almost the last, but at the last they gave way in part. One of the last times I met him in the country he was evidently suffering; the eyes were inflamed and red. I asked him about them. "Yes." he answered, "they give me some trouble, and my oculist has forbidden me to use them till he has operated on them." It appeared that the operation was to consist in scooping out the inside of the lids; with other agreeable processes I asked when this was to be done. "Oh, it was to have been performed some time ago, but I put it off." And it presently came out that he had a piece of work in hand which he was anxious to finish. The operation would have inter rupted this, and so he toiled on at his self-imposed task, enduring the pain and taking the chance, bravely but not wisely, of a permanent intury to his sight, rather than disappoint his Oxford public. Such were the circumstances i which part of his "Erasmus" was composed. I make his pedant-critics a present of this anec G. W. S. dote.

SPEAKER CRISP GOING ON A VACATION.

HE IS SUFFERING FROM A NERVOUS AFFECTION OF THE HEART.

Washington, Jan. 17.-Speaker Crisp will leave here for Asheville, N. C., on Saturday evening next to seek a brief season of rest and in the hope that a change of climate may prove beneficial to his health several weeks for a nervous disease which seems to affect the heart. A consultation was had by Drs. Sowers and Busey, of this city, at the Speaker's apartments last night, at which time he was carefully examined, and the conclusion reached was that e should leave the city for several weeks. Speaker risp replied that it would be embarrassing at this incture to be absent from his duties for so long a eriod, but promised to go for a week at least, be-eving that the effect of even so short a stay would a helpful to him.

OBLOQUY AND OUTRAGE.

From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

We deplore the fall of this old chieftain; we resent the obloquy which narrow-minded politicians are putting upon the Democracy of the Volunteer State; we grieve over the cutrage they are doing the party. Tennesseeans everywhere are ashamed as they read the dispatches from Nashville; Democrats all over the Union blush for the deeds that are there being done in the name of Democracy, to Democracy's dishonor. AFTER THE NEW-YORK PATTERN.

From The Syracuse Journal.

The Democratic Governor, Turney, holds on to the office, after the expiration of his term, and the political scheme for excluding the Republican Gov-ernor-eject from office is being carried to its pur-pose. We have been a State within one of a hundred years, but never before has Tennessee had a fraudulent Governor. Peter Turney enjoys the distinction of being the man to break the record. He will stand at the head of the list of frauds, and it is sincerely hoped that he will be the last for a hundred years to come.

it would soon be possible to get control of the building. She has had consultations with two or three persons connected with the club and with th estate, but nothing definite has yet been done, and nothing can be done at present. The club has not given any notice that it is unable to carry out its plans, and the rent from the club will not be due in several weeks yet. No proceedings to disposses the present tenants can begin till the rent has fallen due and the club has falled to pay it. Then is no doubt that Miss Davenport wants the Casino, but a good deal of history has often passed into the records of that house in less time than the Casino Club still has before it, and almost anything may happen.

A GIFT FROM THE "AUTOCKAT'S" LIBRARY.

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 17 (Special).-Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, of the Supreme Judicial Court, has presented to the Athenaeum 10,000 volumes from the library of his father. Many of the books are bound volumes of magazines, including a complete 'The Atlantic Monthly." In a letter to William R. Plunkett Judge Holmes says that, as he does not like to sell his father's books, it is a pleasure to send them to a place which his father loved. send them to a place which his father loved. Mr. Plunkett makes the suggestion that each volume shall have a label reciling the fact that it came from the library of Dr. Qliver Wendell Holmes. The gift will be a great ac lifen to the library of the Athenaeum, and will be highly prized by the people of Plittstield and of Berkshire County. It is peculiarly fitting that these books should serve as a memorial to Dr. Holmes in the town in which he had lived and which has so many associations connected with him and his writings.

FOR THE YALE DINNER TO-NIGHT.

Chauncey M. Depew, who has spoken at so many Yale dinners, will not be present at the annual alumni dinner to be held to-night at Sherry's. Mr. Depew will dine with the Daughters of the Revoution instead. Judge Henry E. Howland will prelution instead. Judge Henry E. Howland will preside and some dozen toasts will be responded to. STORY OF A CONVICTS LUCK.

HIS WIFE INTERCEDES WITH THE MAN HE TRIED TO ROB, AND GETS THE VICTIM TO APPEAL TO THE GOVERNOR.

One of the last official acts of Governor Flower before he went out of office was to commun the twenty-year sentence of the convict John Powell, whose real name is Moore. Moore has been an inmate of Sing Sing Prison since 1887, charged with burglary. His acomplice in the rime was William Mason, who also received a entence of twenty years.
In the early part of the winter of 1887 the house of D. Ogden Bradley, at Dobbs Ferry, was one wred by burglars. It was after midnight and Mr. Bradley and his family had retired for the night. Mr. Bradley had been asleep a short time when he was awakened by some one in his room. Upon looking up he saw a man standing near his bed Mr. Bradley jumped from the bed and the thief ran out into the hall, followed by Mr. Bradley. As Mr. Bradley entered the hall he saw a secon man waiting for the one who was in the room. Both men dashed downstairs and out into the road and disappeared. Mr. Bradley quickly drew on his clothing and started in search of the men Captain Mangin, of the Yonkers police force, was informed of the attempt to rob the house and of the escape of the men. Early that morning the two men were arrested in Yonkers, and after a trial in White Plains they were each sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment in Sing Sing

Just before Christmas, Mr. Bradley was sitting in the office of the Tarrytown National Bank, of which he is the president, when a well-dressed woman entered the bank and asked for him. was taken into the room where Mr. Bradley was sitting. She informed Mr. Bradley that she was the wife of John Powell, who seven years ago was caught in the act of robbing his house. She said that her husband at that time had become acquainted with questionable characters and was led to able people, and that she also came from a good family.

The woman gave her name as Moore, which was also her husband's name, he taking the name of Powell when he was arrested. The woman told Mr. Bradley that she had come to him for the purpose of asking him to intercede in her husband's behalf for a pardon. Mr. Bradley considered the matter and decided to communicate with the prison officials regarding Powell Keeper Connaughton, of the prison, said Powell had been a good prisoner.

Mr. Bradley then wrote a letter to Governor Flower asking him to consider the application of Mrs. Moore for the purion of her husband. The Governor refused to parion Powell, but commuted his sentence so that his term would expire on April 1. Had not Powell's term been commuted, he would have had five more years of imprisonment to serve.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR THE SENERIT OF THE

A large and appreciative audience attended th one act piece entitled "Drifted Apart." Miss Tanner had the part of Lady Gwendoline Bloomfield, and Mr. Russell that of Sir Geoffrey Bloomfield.
The programme was ended by Roland Reed and his company in the second act of Mr. Reed's new satirical comedy, "The Politician, or The Woman's Plank." Mr. Reed appeared in the role of General Josiah Limber. Miss Isadore Rush cleverly took the role of Cicopatra Sturgiss, of the Twentieth Century, The stage was under the direction of Norman Campbell. All the artists volunteered their services.

NOTES OF THE STAGE.

In consequence of the sickness of Mme. Nordica the managers of the Metropolitan Opera House have been compelled to make a change in the opera for to-night from "L'Africaine," as heretofore announced, to "William Tell." The cast will include Miss Lu ile Hill, Mile Bauermeister, Signor Ancora Edonard de Resske, M. Plançon and Signor

An anusual performance is announced for Tues day evening of next week at the Irving Place The atre. It is a German version of a Sanserit play entitled "Mrichehhatkatt," which means "The Toy entitled "Mrichchharkatt," which means "The To-lart." The announcements say that it was writter about the year we B. C. Possibly it was, but som-good authorities believe that it was nearer 29 A. D and that it may have been much later. Its author ship is attributed to King Sudraka. It has been freely translated into German by Emil Pohl, and it is presented under the title of "Vasantasena, which is the name of one of the characters.

The programme for next week, the last of the er agement of Mr. and Mrs. Kendal at Abbey's The atre, has been arranged as follows: Monday and Tuesday, "Lady Clanearty", Wednesday and Thursday, "A White fale", Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday matines, "The Ironmaster."

Edward Harrigan expects to go to London in the spring with some of the principal members of his company, and present two or three of his plays, probably including "Old Lavender" and "The Leather Patch"

At the Metropolitan Opera House on Sunday evening, in addition to the programme by the or-chestra under the direction of Anton Seidt, Ros-sini's "Stabat Mater" will be given, with Mme. Nordica, Mme. Scaleni, M. Plancon and Signor Tamagno as the vocalists.

Wilson Barrett will present "Othello" at the American Theatre this evening for the last time. The eight weeks' engagement of this sterling actor will end with two performances of "The Silver King" to-morrow afternoon and evening, when he will give way to Mr. French's production of "The District Attorney."

SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION DINNER. The demand for seats at the banquet of the Sons the American Revolution at Delmonico's to-nigh has been unprecedented, and the large dining-room will be taxed to its utmost capacity to hold all who have paid for their plates, to say nothing of the few invited guests. Arrangements have been made to provide for all of them, however, in the main dining room. Everything points to a brilliant celebration. The speakers will be Chauncey M. Depew, General Nelson A. Miles, Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, ex-Governor Hugh S. Thompson, of South Carolina; General Horace Porter. Elbridge S. Brooks, Professor Arthur M. Wheeler, of Yale University, and the Rev. Samuel A. Eliet. The Rev. Pr. Charles C. T.ffany will pronounce the benediction.

Paul Holt Bowen, a son of Henry C. Bowen, the veteran publisher of "The Independent," died in San Diego, Cal., yesterday. He was twenty-seven years old, an invalid, and was staying in California for the benefit of his health.

SHOT AND KILLED BY HIS SON IN-LAW. St. Louis, Jan. 17.-Jacob Straub, an aged man living at No. 817 Wright-st., was shot three times and killed in front of his home this afternoon by G. W. Steinbecker, his son-in-law. Steinbecker and his wife separated a mouth ago, the woman going to live in her father's house. The husband visited his wife to-day and became abusive, whereupon Straub drove him from the house. When the two reached the streat, the shooting occurred. Steinbecker es-

HE HAD AN ALLEGED WITCH CRUCIFIED San Francisco, Jan. 17 (Special).-Four Indian terms in San Quentin Prison. The most noted criminal is 80-8can-Doo, big medicine man, who was convicted because he was responsible for killing a woman accused of witchcraft. It seems that the grip attacked his tribe and swept off about one-third. His "medicine" failed to work, and deaths continued, whereupon he declared that a witch was causing trouble. He pointed out one old woman, and she was nailed to a tree and allowed to hang till she died of starvation.

MISS NIEDRINGHAUS WOULD NOT WAIT. THE BENEFITS BIG AND SUCCESSFUL.

PROBABLY NOT FAR FROM $22,000 RAISED FOR THE FAMILIES OF THE DEAD FIREMEN. The two audiences at the two great benefits for the firemen's families yesterday were two great sights. No theatrical benefit was ever given in New-York for a better object, and the public's appreciation of that fact was proved by the gatherings at the Academy of Music and the Grand Opera House As the result the families of Chief John J. Bresnan and Assistant Foreman John L. Rooney will receive substantial help for many a day. The doors of the two theatres were besieged by crowds long before they were opened, and the people did not cease coming in throngs till long after the entertainments had begun. When the audiences were finally settled in their places they were worth looking at. In each theatre every seat was occupied and people stool behind them and climbed over one another's backs to get a glimpse of the stage. The programmes were carried out with little variation. They are here given, to show to whom the credit Mantelli, song, "Charite," Faure, accompanist Louis V. Saar; Miss Cissy Fitzgeraid; Signor Abramoff, aria, "Sperate of Fight," from "Nabucco," Verdi; Paui Cinquevalli, juggler; J. E. Dodson; Annabelia, butterfit, rainbow and sun dances; the Wilmot Duo, bleycle act; foirth act of "The Cotton King," played by Eben Plympton, Dominick Murray, Cuyler Hastings, Basil West, Edward See, Dan Collyer, J. W. Davenport, E. H. Bender, Andrew Hayes, S. C. Stevens, Sam Lash, Willie Smith, Louis Beicher, Frank Jones, Miss May Wheeler, Mrs. Selden Irwin, Miss Amelia Summerville, Miss Bijou Fernandez and Miss Payson Graham; Tony Pastor, the Sexton Brothers and McMahon and King were substituted for three preformers who failed to appear. Flowers and souvenir programmes were sold in the lobby by "Aunt" Louise Eldridge, Miss Adelaide Prince, Miss Ruth Carpenter, Miss Madge Dean, Miss May Penfeld, Miss Clara Thropp, Miss Clara Hunter, Miss Anna Allen, Miss Katherine Johnson, Miss Olive Nelson, Mirs Bijou Fernandez, Miss Ella Hughes Wood, Miss Amelia Summerville and Baby Lafi. The head usher of the Academy, Lewis Davis, his assistants and all the other employes of the house gave their services.

On the programme which was given at the Grand Opera House were the Abbott Sisters, Wilson and Waring, M. Stainville, Miss Queenie Vassar, Harry Fisher, Harry Wright, William Pruette, Baron Berthold, William Melaughlin, Richard Carroll, Harry Paimer and A. de Novellis, of the "Rob Roy" company, Miss Ada Lewis, Andrew Mack, Princess Paulina, Mrs. Kendal, the three Romas, Miss Elenore Carroll and the third act of "Superba."

Here Mme, Mathilde Cottrelly was in charge of the flower and programme industry. She was assisted by Misses Grace Horton, Vivian Bernard, Kate Foley, Blanche Eurton, Bertha Livingston, It was impossible last night to get complete and accurate returns of the receipts of the benefits. It was believed, however, that they would be not far from $17.00. To this is to be added the sum of $2.00 raised by the Manhatian Club. The presi Saar; Miss Cissy Fitzgerald; Signor Abramoff, YESTERDAY'S MUSIC.

At Chickering Hall yesterday afternoon the cert, for this season. This organization, as the people of New-York have been told, is composed of young musicians born in this country, who are eniertainment at the Columbia Theatre, in Brook-lyn, yesterday afternoon given by Mr. and Mrs. of orchestral musicians we are no longer dependent upon Europe, as we have always been heretofore. Miss Neilie Edwards, Miss Mary Cross, Miss John Floyd Delated, Miss Hoppin, Miss Margared Morgan, Miss Hoppin, Miss Margared Morgan, Miss Hoppin, Miss Margared Morgan, Miss Hoppin, Miss Hoppin, Miss Neilie Adec, Miss Elaine Neeser, Miss Mahel Jones Miss Alice Post, Miss Edith Clapp, Miss Louisa Barlow, Valentine G. Livingston, Jr. J. Langdon Erving, G. Heekman Hoppin, James Barnes, Fitzhugh Townsend, Alexander S. Webb, Jr. Henry Taylor and J. Sanford Barnes, Jr. The last Cinderella dance will take place on February H.

Miss Callender and Miss de Forest last night gave the first of their evening receptions, with music, in their apartments in the Tiffany Building, Seventy-second-st, and Mailson-ave. The guests, numbering about 26, were entertained in the salon, and a most attractive programme of music was offered. Anton Sedi conducted his etchestra, and Mrs. Tyler Dutton, soprano, and M. Plançon sang several solos to the plano accompanium of victor Harris. A supper followed the concert.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerty gave a collido. M. Thomson played it in a way that buffled all fault-finding from a technical point of view, and of the many difficulties of the work. So far as and nothing less. One must know from the printed page how difficult the music is which he plays; he can never learn it from watching M.
Thomson play, for to him there seems to be no difference between the simplest cantabile in the world and music that is simply impossible to the vast majority of violin players. He was heard vast majority of violin players. He was heard by a sympathetic audience yesterday, and got his reward in the way of applause, though his mar-vellous cadenza in the last movement was in-terrupted by the breaking of a string. Yesterday evening the Beethoven String Quartet, headed by Mr. Gustav Dantreuther, gave a con-cert in the small room of Carnegie Hall. This club, which has been cultivating a taste for chamber cert in the small room of Carnegie Hall. This club, which has been cultivating a taste for chamber music realously, consistently and intelligently for years, has etcadily improved in effectiveness, and it seemel as if last night's concert marked the high-water mark of its achievement. The concert was thoroughly delightful, and it was impossible not to note in the performance a progress toward that mascullarity and strength the absence of which has been deplored heretofore. This, however, without a loss in the refinement which has been commented on as the distinguishing feature of the dub's playing heretofore. The programme consisted of Smelana's quartet, "Aus Meinem Lebon" in E minor, the two middle movements from Mozart's trio in E flat, and the Brahms's quartet, op. 5, with planoforte, in which the club had the excellent help of Mr. Reinhold Herman in the planoforte part.
